SEGUNDA LENGUA EXTRANJERA. INGLÉS

A COFFEE EXPERT

Seven years ago, Savina Giachgia had tried many professions: speech and language therapy, photography, even beekeeping. Then a friend asked her to help out in a coffee shop in her hometown of Larissa, in Greece, and she discovered her true passion: coffee.

“I wasn’t even a coffee person back then,” she says, “I’d have been more likely to order a juice.” However, she developed a love for all things related to coffee grinding, brewing and serving. “I was fascinated by just how many people are involved in the process of making coffee – from bean to cup,” Savina says.

Today she lives in Thessaloniki, works as coffee ambassador in northern Greece for a large food and beverage company, and she is officially the world’s best female coffee brewer. Last year, Savina came second in the World Brewers Cup.

She lets us know some of her coffee secrets.

- You must train your taste: Taste as many things as you can. By tasting a wide range of foods, you can build up a database of flavours. If you’ve never tasted papaya, you won’t identify the papaya notes in your coffee brew.
- Use proper water: Since water is a major component of coffee, its quality greatly influences the taste. Professional brewers use an ideal water to match every coffee. Even if that’s too hard to achieve at home, filtering your water is still a good idea.
- Pick your equipment: The material, shape and colour of everything you use to make coffee has an impact on the result. This is where my love of pottery comes in. I make my own ceramic coffee cups in my spare time.

- Ask for freddo espresso: Most Greek people will have at least one freddo espresso a day. It's a double shot of espresso with two ice cubes blended in a mixer to add some air, then served on the rocks.

Finally, Savina's most important advice is to enjoy your coffee the way you like it. There's no right or wrong when it comes to personal preference in coffee. Don't let anyone tell you what you can and can't have in your coffee. The best coffee is the one you enjoy the most.
